Remainder of RED LIGHT WINTER run canceled due to serious injury from an act of violence

Milwaukee, WI – Youngblood Theatre Company regretfully announces that it must cancel the remainder of its run of RED LIGHT WINTER by Adam Rapp, which was to run until February 2, 2010 at the Alchemist Theatre.

Early Sunday morning, Andrew Edwin Voss, RED LIGHT WINTER performer and Youngblood co-founder, was the victim of an incident of violence and rushed to urgent care at a local hospital. Andrew remains in critical condition.

Youngblood will be unable to complete our run of RED LIGHT WINTER as planned and appreciate everyone's patience while Andrew's friends and family deal with this tragic and senseless act of violence.

Patrons who purchased tickets for the remainder of the run will be offered the opportunity to have their money refunded or donated towards Andrew's costly medical expenses. The staff of the Alchemist Theatre will contact patrons individually regarding their tickets.

The Alchemist Theatre has graciously offered to accept donations for Andrew's family through its website: www.alchemisttheatre.com.

In addition, The Alchemist Theatre (2569 S. Kinnickinnic, Milwaukee, WI) will host a fundraiser and community-gathering event in support of Andrew on Friday January 29, starting at 7:00pm. Details will be forthcoming.

We ask you that you please respect Andrew's family privacy as he recovers.

Our love, support, and prayers go to Andrew and his family with hopes of a speedy recovery.

More information will be posted as it becomes available on our Web site at www.youngbloodtheatre.com.
